the theory and practice of modeling cities and regions as complex self organizing systems presenting widely used cellular automata based models theoretical discussions and applications cities and regions grow or occasionally decline and continuously transform themselves as they do so this book describes the theory and practice of modeling the spatial dynamics of urban growth and transformation as cities are complex adaptive self organizing systems the most appropriate modeling framework is one based on the theory of self organizing systems an approach already used in such fields as physics and ecology the book presents a series of models most of them developed using cellular automata ca which are inherently spatial and computationally efficient it also provides discussions of the theoretical methodological and philosophical issues that arise from the models a case study illustrates the use of these models in urban and regional planning finally the book presents a new dynamic theory of urban spatial structure that emerges from the models and their applications the models are primarily land use models but the more advanced ones also show the dynamics of population and economic activities and are integrated with models in other domains such as economics demography and transportation the result is a rich and realistic representation of the spatial dynamics of a variety of urban phenomena the book is unique in its coverage of both the general issues associated with complex self organizing systems and the specifics of designing and implementing models of such systems this book explores the impact of localities and regions on universities and shows how the diversity of the higher education landscape is critically affected by the geophysical character of regions and their differentiated economies and cultures regional inequalities bear heavily on universities strategy making a study of the interrelationship between higher and further education argues that from a regional perspective a change to a tertiary education system in england following wales would create the conditions for better local and regional coordination universities make a significant contribution to levelling up through technology transfer and the creation of innovation hubs but the contribution of locally or regionally based students who on graduation return to disadvantaged communities rather than seek employment elsewhere should be recognised also as a longer term step to redressing regional inequality the book argues strongly that the time has come to decentralise the governance of a re aligned tertiary system to regions and identifies the move to create metro mayors and combined authorities as providing the appropriate vehicle to release new initiative from regional sources it cites the success of decentralisation to scotland and wales as offering relevant models for scrutiny the authors draw on 12 uk widely differentiated university case studies a survey of further education and a study of three continental european comparators germany ireland and norway to develop the argument accounting for nearly 40 of global energy related co2 emissions and sometimes as much as 70 in large cities buildings and construction are central to the low carbon transition decarbonising buildings especially the old stock through energy efficiency improvements and renewable energy use not only reduces carbon emissions but also generates co benefits in health energy affordability and the labour market creative and cultural industries broadly defined are now considered by many policy makers across europe at the heart of their national innovation and economic development agenda similarly many european cities and regions have adopted policies to support and develop these industries and their local support infrastructures however this policy making agenda implicitly incorporates and indeed often conflates elements of cultural and creative industries the creative class and so on which are typically employed without due consideration of context thus a better understanding is required to this end this book features eight research papers split evenly with regard to geographical focus between the uk and continental europe the latter covering spain germany france luxemburg and belgium individually and in combination there is also a similar division in terms of those focusing primarily on the policy level the chapters of clifton and macaulay mould and comunian pareja eastaway and pradel i miquel perrin and those of the individual creative actor the chapters of alfken et al bennett et al wedemeier and brown this book was previously published as a special issue of european planning studies
